

ERI Opens Doors for the Day

The warmth of an Autumn Day on October 28 brought many visitors to East Rock Institute's home at 251 Dwight Street in New Haven, Connecticut. The front stairs were decorated with pumpkins and the doors were swung open all afternoon for people to stop by for refreshments and good conversation.

Dr. Hesung Chun Koh, our founder, proudly toured students from Yale's Korean American Students at Yale (KASY) through our extensive archive and resource center. The students were thrilled to discover our lower level library, which contains volumes of books, newsletters, teaching materials all related to Korea and the Korean Diaspora. The personal tour by Dr. Koh was a highlight for many!

Neighbors dropped by to learn about our programs and many friends who have not visited in years enjoyed delightful conversation and reconnected with old friends. Board President, Dr. Chris Park, provided a welcome greeting and thank you to our many new friends.

Our offices are located at 251 Dwight Street, in the Historic District of downtown New Haven. This classic home features hardwood floors and leaded glass windows throughout. High ceilings and two fireplaces on the main level provide an inviting feel to visitors who come to study or research or to listen to presentations from lecturers.

Happy Thanksgiving!
